

SUFFOCATED IN THEIR BEDS.

Mrs. Broderick and Three Children Found Dead When the Fire Had Been Put Out.
In the smallest of three shanties which stood on the rocks in the rear of a row of big flats in Madison Avenue, between 118th and 119th streets, Anna Broderick lived with her two children, Mamie, aged 5 years, and Richard, aged 18 months. To add to her slender earnings she took care of a foundling named John, whom she got from the New York Foundling Asylum and for whose care she received $10 a month. At 3 o'clock yesterday morning the shanty caught fire, and all its inmates perished.

Mrs. Broderick's husband, a driver, died about a year ago. She was 26 years old. The shanty she lived in was two stories high, with room on each floor, and she and the three children slept under the peaked roof in a single bed. The house adjoins a larger wooden house.

THE BURNED SHANTY.

occupied by Bernard McPhailis, and his five children. Mrs. Broderick was behind her work, and at 10 o'clock, when she left her ironing table to go to bed, a hot fire blazed in the shanty. Mrs. McPhailis, who had been sleeping in the same room carrying one of his children under her arm, awoke and ran to the top of his lungs. He leaped and bounded at the widow's door and then ran back into his burning home. The fire had spread to his children's clothes, and the heat of the flames had hardly reached them. It was impossible to carry the little ones down the steep stairs and the fire had broken through the floor and lowered them in blankets through the opening. They were removed to the Morgue, where they will afterwards be interred by Mr. Broderick's mother. Mrs. McPhailis now lives under the auspices of the Amalgamated Brass Workers.
